Device, accessibility-tree and keyboard simulations

Device profiles run in an isolated headless Chromium browser. Accessibility-tree checks inspect what assistive technology can receive; no physical device or screen reader was operated. Keyboard checks use real Tab, Shift+Tab and Enter events, sampling at most 12 focus stops per page/profile.

Status: pass

Consent interface checks

Consent component checks run separately from page-content layout checks.

- Pass — privacy controls are injected on every generated page
- Pass — consent manager script was generated
- Pass — service disclosure supports data, recipient, retention, and supplier privacy links
- Pass — stored choices are tied to proposed and effective dates
- Pass — new visitors start with every optional service off
- Pass — accept and reject controls share the same component styling
- Pass — consent component CSS selectors stay within the manager
- Pass — component stays inside the viewport
- Pass — component content stays inside its own box
- Pass — accept and reject actions have equal visual weight
- Pass — optional services begin unchecked
- Pass — expanded service details disclose all configured fields
- Pass — component stays inside the viewport
- Pass — component content stays inside its own box
- Pass — accept and reject actions have equal visual weight

Responsive and consent screenshots

Page screenshots use a 390 by 844 CSS pixel mobile viewport and hide the consent component while measuring page content. Separate consent screenshots crop the component at desktop and mobile sizes.

Scope and limits

- Structural accessibility checks inspect generated HTML and CSS. Browser checks separately sample device emulation, the browser accessibility tree, and real Tab/Shift+Tab/Enter events when Chromium is available.
- Page layout is measured with the consent manager hidden. The consent manager has separate component checks and screenshots, so its size does not change the page-content overflow result.
- Agent-friendliness checks inspect metadata, structured data, internal links, robots.txt, sitemap.xml, and llms.txt. They do not guarantee crawler indexing or answer quality.
- This automated report is not a legal-compliance assessment or a substitute for manual review.
- Headless phone/tablet profiles and accessibility-tree inspection are simulations, not physical devices or NVDA, Narrator, VoiceOver, or TalkBack. Keyboard sampling does not cover every possible interaction; manual zoom, contrast and assistive-technology review remain necessary.
- Markdown self-checks render a built-in fixture in memory without publishing tutorial articles or requiring a posts directory.
